SUBJECT: PAKISTAN MEDIA REACTION: JANUARY 27, 2009

Summary: Reports and photographs of the violence in Quetta following the killing of a local political leader dominated headlines in all newspapers on Tuesday. All newspapers front-paged reports that 'courts' set up by Tehrik-e-Taliban Pakistan in the restive Swat valley have started functioning despite "Prime Minister Gilani's assertion that they would not be allowed to function." Also highlighted were reports of a bomb blast in Dera Ismail Khan "killing at least six people." All newspapers prominently displayed remarks of Finance Adviser Tarin which stated "U.S. docked $55 million from 'terror war' bill." All dailies also gave prominent coverage to Ambassador Patterson's donation of security equipment to Frontier Corps and nutritional biscuits to children at an IDP camp in Peshawar.

Most major dailies continued to run editorials on the deteriorating law and order situation in the Swat Valley and the taking over of Jamaatud Daawa headquarters by the government. The English daily, "Dawn," noted that "Muridke, with its pro-poor face, and Swat, with its uninhibited brutal militants, represent the two ends of the militancy spectrum in Pakistan. The tactics for uprooting the Jamaatud Daawa/Lashkar-i-Taiba in Punjab and the TTP in Swat must therefore necessarily be different." Another English daily, "The News," observed that "we need now to demonstrate that extremist groups do more harm than good. People need to see their true face. Until this is revealed, groups such as the JuD will continue to paint themselves as martyrs." The leading Urdu daily, "Jang," wrote: "This state of affairs not only shows complete failure of both the federal and provincial administrations, but also damaging Pakistan's image as a moderate and progressive Muslim state across the world. Thus, the government must find out a workable solution without delay, or else it will be too late." End Summary.

Editorials/Op-eds

"No Easy Solution," an editorial in the Karachi-based center-left independent national English daily "Dawn" (cir. 55,000) (01/27)

"Muridke, with its pro-poor face, and Swat, with its uninhibited, brutal militants, represent the two ends of the militancy spectrum in Pakistan. The tactics for uprooting the Jamaatud Dawa/Lashkar-i-Taiba in Punjab and the TTP in Swat must therefore necessarily be different.... Appeasing the TTP in Swat today virtually guarantees the militants will spread their tentacles further afield in Pakistan. The same goes for the Jamaatud Daawa. If the provincial and federal governments do not work together to ensure the group is shut down for good, in all likelihood it will re-emerge later in a new form."

"Rooting Out The JuD," an editorial in the centrist national English daily "The News" (cir. 55,000) (01/27)

"Over the past eight years, the JuD has been able to paint itself in the minds of people as a group engaged in 'good' work. But all this cannot disguise the fact that the group also promotes extremist ideas; that suspicions lurk of its possible involvement in terrorist activities. What the authorities need to do is put the evidence that exists on this count before the people. We need now to demonstrate that extremist groups do more harm than good. People need to see their true face. Until this is revealed, groups such as the JuD will continue to paint themselves as martyrs, blaming Indian and western pressure for the action against them."

"Both Federal And Provincial Governments Should Join Hands To Deal With Swat Situation," an editorial in the leading mass circulation centrist Urdu daily "Jang" (cir. 300,000) (01/27)

"This state of affairs not only shows complete failure of both the federal and provincial administrations, but also damaging Pakistan's image as a moderate and progressive Muslim state across the world. Thus, the government must find out a workable solution without delay, or else it will be too late."

"Crackdown On Daawa," an editorial in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (01/27)

"The latest measure inspires confidence in the government's determination to root out militancy from the country. Though the international community in general has been appreciative of our strategy to combat extremism, New Delhi, as befits its traditional stance, continues pointing fingers at Pakistan for not doing enough."

"Taking Control Of Markaz-i-Taiba," an editorial in the second-largest, center-right nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 125,000) (01/27)

"If the action of government taking over Markaz-i-Taiba was carried out just to appease America and India then this act cannot be praised. Lahore Division Commissioner himself said that he did not see any unlawful activity in the Markaz-i-Taiba.... If an organization with the name Lashkar-i-Taiba operates in Indian held Kashmir and helps Kashmiri Mujahideen then punishing Jamaatud Dawa for that is not prudent."

"Taking over offices of Jamaatud Daawa," an editorial in the Karachi-based right-wing pro-Jamaat-e-Islami Urdu daily "Jasarat" (cir. 3,000) (01/27)

"Under Indian pressure, the Punjab government has taken control of office of Jamaatud Dawa and established police check post besides Jamaat office in Muridke. This all is happening under pressure from India which accused a welfare organization of involvement in Mumbai attacks."

"Swat Hit-List And Two-Finger Sign," an editorial in the Lahore-based liberal English language daily "Daily Times" (cir. 10,000) (01/27)

"The scene in Swat is depressing and it is all the more so because it is a warlord's two-finger sign in the face of our mighty army. Swat is the war that Pakistan will have to fight if it wants to survive. All other 'threats' are political red herrings."

"Menacing New Threat," an editorial in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (01/27)

"The pity is that for so long the fanatical fringe, under the leadership of firebrand Maulvi Fazlullah, has been allowed to spread its message among the largely illiterate population through his illegal FM radio station, with the result that its ranks have swelled. That has made things so much harder for the government, that it no longer is able to exercise its writ over a large part of the valley. And the militant commanders have the guts to threaten with dire consequences those who they think have transgressed the limits imposed by the Sharia.... Can one hope that the challenge, which the menacing threat poses, would be met with firmness and a clear sense of purpose and the writ of the state squarely established?"

"Taliban court in Swat," an editorial in the second-largest, center-right nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 125,000) (01/27)

"Having a state within a state is tantamount to violation of Pakistani law. The establishment of unauthorized Sharia based courts by local Taliban, and on top of it the government and opposition resolve to use force against each other is dangerous."

"Swat: The Need For Talks And Reconciliation," an editorial in the center-right Urdu daily "Pakistan" (cir. 10,000) (01/27)

"We want to reiterate that Ulema could play important role in the efforts to rid Swat of the current bloodshed. Those Ulema, who are respected in religious circles, should open up the door to dialogue with Maulvi Fazlullah, Baitullah Mehsud and other Taliban leaders."

"Increasing Militancy; Establish Government Writ," an editorial in liberal Urdu daily "Express" (cir. 25,000) (01/27)

"The manner in which the Swat issue is being handled makes one feel that it is being treated as an internal provincial matter but sooner or later everyone will admit that this is a national issue as the way militancy is spreading shows that provincial borders or federal units do not matter to the militants...."

"Taliban's [Hit] List: An Attempt To Weaken Pakistan In The Name Of Islam," an editorial in the Lahore-based Urdu daily "Din" (cir. 5,000) (01/27)

"Prior to the Tehrik-i-Taliban Pakistan, Lal Masjid's Ghazi Abdur Rashid and Maulana Abdul Aziz had also announced setting up similar Shariat Courts, and tried to enforce their concept of Shariat forcibly in the federal capital. Their attempt ended in a tragedy Pakistanis cannot forget. Setting up Shariat courts in Swat and summoning elected leaders and officials is tantamount to a direct confrontation with the state. The Taliban leadership should stop this enmity with Muslims in the name of religion."

"U.S. Policy Pertaining To Pakistan Won't Change," an editorial in the Karachi-based, pro Taliban Jihadi Urdu daily "Islam" (cir. 15,000) (01/27)

"The track-record of Mr. Richard Holbrooke is stained. He played a critical role as Assistant Secretary of State in partition of the Christian-dominant area East Timor from Indonesia and remained active in the Muslim genocide in Bosnia during the Clinton era. Now, he is going to play an 'important' role in Pakistan and Afghanistan. If God forbids, Mr. Holbrooke seeks to repeat the same feat here in Pakistan, then only God can protect Pakistan."

"The Afghanistan Mess," an op-ed by Rasul Bakhsh Rais in the Lahore-based liberal English language daily "Daily Times" (cir. 10,000) (01/27)

"Foreign benefactors and friends are a poor substitute for indigenous political and social forces in mediating conflict between old and new power elites and rival ethnic groups. Reviving the internal social and political energies of Afghanistan is crucial to preventing a return to chaos and civil disorder, which could wipe off the gains made so far. The Obama administration must act differently by focusing on national reconciliation within Afghanistan instead of using force against one particular ethnic or social group to the benefit of its rivals."

"How Holbrooke Will Succeed," an op-ed by Mosharraf Zaidi in the centrist national English daily "The News" (cir. 55,000) (01/27)

"Richard Holbrooke must understand that in Afghanistan and Pakistan 'engaging the elite' has been a miserable failure of a policy for Western powers. Over 200 years of engaging the elite here--generals, politicians, warlords, landlords and mullahs--has failed to produce the kind of emancipative democracy.... Engaging Pakistan's emerging urban middle class, its accountants, artists, historians, doctors, computer nerds, architects and, yes, without question, its lawyers, is the surest, straightest and most honest road out from under the rubble of FATA and towards success for the special representative."

"Holbrooke Special U.S. Envoy For Pak-Afghan," an op-ed by M. Ashraf Mirza in the Islamabad-based rightist English daily "Pakistan Observer" (cir. 5,000) (01/27)

"Mr. Obama should not be oblivious to the fact that withdrawal from Afghanistan will be the only solution to the Afghan imbroglio. And the United States will recognize it sooner than later like Iraq. If war is bad and unacceptable for Iraq, it's equally bad and unacceptable for Afghanistan since both are sovereign countries and were invaded by the U.S. to impose its policy of pre-emption conceived by Bush's notorious Vice President Dick Cheney...."

"India's New Allegation: Change In Strategy Is Needed," an editorial in liberal Urdu daily "Express" (cir. 25,000) (01/27)

"Death threats to the Pakistani High Commissioner prove that not only is the Indian government involved in aggravating the situation, it has given a free hand to extremist Hindus also.... The government must devise a strategy to counter this situation, and the international community must also play a role in trying to rein India in."

"Threat By Extremist Hindu Outfit And Our Political Leadership's Insensitivity," an editorial in the Lahore-based populist center-right Urdu daily "Khabrain" (cir. 50,000) (01/27)

"Following Barack Obama's election, Indian-Americans had written a letter drawing his attention to the fact that groups like the RSS and Vishwa Hindu Parishad were involved in politics of hate against Christians and Muslims in several Indian states. The letter urged the new U.S. administration to help stop this [brand of politics]. Now this extremist trend has increased to the extent of threatening diplomats.... If India takes solid measures against these extremist outfits it will prove that the government has no links with them, otherwise the world will only blame India."

"Threats To The Pakistani High Commissioner And The New Indian Drama," an editorial in the second-largest, center-right nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 125,000) (01/27)

"Pakistan needs to present the evidence of RAW's involvement in terrorism in the tribal areas and Balochistan.... Moreover, Pakistan government should demand custody of those who gave death threats to Pakistani High Commissioner to India."

"Death Threats To Pakistani High Commissioner In India," an editorial in the popular rightist Urdu-language daily "Ausaf" (cir. 10,000) (01/27)

"Pakistan should immediately recall its High Commissioner and other diplomatic staff from New Delhi, as their lives are in danger. Moreover, this anticipated act will also help the international community understand the Hindu radical mindset, and the war-hysteria of the Indians."

"Threat To Envoy," an editorial in the Lahore-based liberal English daily "The Post" (cir. 5,000) (01/27)

"The letter is a grim reminder that after the Mumbai killings the dust of conflict between India and Pakistan has still not settled. It is clear that the terrorist elements in India are encouraged by the Indian government's aggressive stance of directly blaming the government of Pakistan of the terrorist attacks in Mumbai.... India must not be influenced by the hydra of terrorism. Instead, the two countries must fight it jointly."
